Due to rapid price increases, we are now stocking a new brand of erosion control blanket which will replace the Landlock S2 and Eromat High Velocity straw blankets that we typically stock. The new product is called Western Excelsior Excel SS-2 Erosion Control Blanket.

Western Excelsior's Excel SS-2 temporary Erosion Control Blanket (ECB) consists of a 100% certified weed free straw matrix stitched between two nets. The Excel SS-2 ECB provides erosion control for a period of up to one year and serves as a mulching layer.

The Excel SS-2 is approved for use on state projects for Class 1 Slope Protection, Types A, B, C and D. You will not find it listed in the State of Connecticut 2008 qualified products listing but it will be listed when the State issues the new version later this month. In the mean time, we have been given written approval by the State which we can furnish to State inspectors immediately. Copies of this approval have been forwarded to the branches and are also located at the Products counter and Milldale dispatch.

Battery Problems: Part 2

With Spring upon us and the prospect of an economic recovery, people are taking their equipment out after a long period of inactivity and finding that their batteries are dead. If you left batteries in your instrument or data collector (or other devices) for an extended period of time, they are likely to be dead. Rechargeable batteries may or may not recover depending on how long the cell voltage stayed below a nominal value.

We have been receiving calls daily about this and the single most reported problem has been with data collectors.

Most hand held PC's (PDA's) draw power even when they are off. If they are left "off" for a long period of time, the batteries can be drawn down to a level that is too low for the chargers to recover, or even so low that the battery is permanently damaged.

As with all battery powered devices, it is recommended to remove the batteries when not in use. Make sure to exit any running applications, and download your data, prior to removing the batteries so you do not lose or corrupt any files.
